Candidates, Amendments

County set for Nov. 4 election

Polls will open at 6 a.m. Tuesday for Appomatox Countians to vote in the presidential election, decide on four proposed state constitutional amendments, and re-elect Fifth District Representative Daniels to the U.S., House of Representatives.

Voting will take place at ten locations throughout Appomattox County from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m., accordinr to Emma Lemon, county registrar.

The ten precincts and voting locations therein are: Agee Precinct, Route 616; Chap Precinct, Route 694; Cheatwood Precinct, Routes 647 and 48; Clover Hill Precinct, Vera School Building on Route 24; Courthouse Precinct, County Courthouse on Court Street in town of Appomattox; Oakville Precinct, Route 126 schoolhouse; Pamplin Precinct, Pamplin Firehouse; Rocks Precinct, Evergreen Ruritan Club Building; Walkers' Church Precinct, Hix's Store; and Stonewall Precinct, Route 606.

Fifth District Representative Dan Daniels will run unopposed in the election, according to Lemon.

There are six pairs of candidates on the presidential ballot this year, according to Lemon. The Republican ticket includes Ronald Reagan for president and George Bush for vice president; the Democrat ticket includes Jimmy Carter for president and Walter Mondale for vice president; the Libertarian ticket includes Ed Clark for president and David Koch for vice president.

In addition, there are three pairs of independent candidates on the ballot this year. They are John Anderson and Patrick Lucey; Barry Commoner and LaDonna Harris; and Clifton DeBerry and Matilda Zimmermann.

Appomattox Countians will also be casting their votes on four proposed amendments to the state constitution, according to Lemon.

Those four proposed amendments are:

1) To authorize the General Assembly to convene for a limited period of time to consider legislation vetoed by the Governor;

2) To authorize the General Assembly to decrease the maximum indebtedness a city or town may incur;

3) To permit certain tax exemptions for people who own property used by persons but less than 65 years old or who are disabled;

4) To permit certain tax exemptions for property whose purpose is to replace oil or natural gas generating equipment installed after Dec. 31, 1974.

There will be no votes on local issues in this election, according to Lemon.

She said there are 5,019 registered voters in Appomattox County.

MAYOR RONALD C. SPIGGLE has designated the month of November as "Volunteer Firemen's Month" and with this designation has given the authority to Mr. John Hall and Mr. James Ford, Jr., shown above, to collect Christmas donations for the Appomattox Volunteer Firemen. The volunteer firemen, concerned with the welfare of their fellow citizens and the community as a whole, spend long hours in community service with no monetary compensation. When Mr. Hall or Mr. Ford contacts you during the month of November, give generously. Your donation will be used as a gift of cash to each of the volunteer firemen. The presentation will be made when the Town of Appomattox entertains the Appomatox Volunteer Firemen. Contributions may also be mailed to: John Hall, P.O. Box 245, Appomattox, Va. 24522

Boo!!!

GHOSTS AND GOBLINS will have their way on Friday night.....and the goblins will get you if you don't watch out! Children, enjoy yourselves; parents, remember, children 18 years of age and under must be off the streets by 1 a.m. Drive carefully...let's have a happy Halloween!

Loan closet in need

One walker, one commode chair, one wheelchair and NO hospital beds are on hand in the County Loan Closet.

That means some people have loan items to turn in.

The Appomattox County American Cancer Society and Rescue Squad ask if you no longer need your hospital bed, walker or commode that you return them as soon as possible.

Hearing impaired

Students learn ways of coping

By FRANCES H. PAULETTE

A visitor walking past the open door of a very special classroom at the Appomattox County High School (after regular school hours), might be surprised, after pausing at the door, to see a few students and teachers alike, engaging in conversation.....and not a single sound being uttered.

The classroom is special.....it is special for two reasons. First of all the group is communicating through the medium of sign language. The second reason the group is special is that the class members have volunteered to attend this class taught by Mrs. Nancy Lisa, Hearing-Impaired Instructor of the Appomatox County School System. The teachers feel the need of attending in order thay they may be better qualified to assist those students with a hearing problem; the students, in many cases have a friend who is hearing impaired and he or she wants to be a better friend.

Appomattox is a small rural county which provides all special education on a local basis. As the result of Child Find activities in 1975, the public schools determined the need for providing services for hearing impaired students. The county applied for and was granted funding through Title VI-B to start a project.

The program in Appomattox has received recognition to the point where requests were made for contributions to state publications concerning the program.

Mrs. Lisa, who teaches the class in sign language on a voluntary basis, is assisted in her Hearing Impaired classroom by Mrs. Patty Wallace, Instructional Teachers Aid. In this classroom there are five students with a hearing problem; one third-grader, two from the sixth grade and two high school students.

Students with hearing impairments attend regular classrooms for homeroom and as many classes with their classmates without a hearing problem as they are able to handle.

Total communication, whatever is best for the child, speech, sign language, or lip reading or a combination of all.....that is the aim of the teacher.

In many of the teaching activities, the teacher writes down what the student says during classroom conversation. A story is then made up based on the activities and words used during the conversation. The story is printed in large letters on a flip chart with special emphasis on key words.

For example, the conversation may have been about chocolate pudding. The teacher, with the help of the student makes up a simple story (or not so simple, depending on the age of the student), and the story is written on the chart. Then the group makes the pudding; then they eat the pudding. What an experience. Not one they will likely forget.

When a recent visit was made to the classroom, the chart was there, the story was there....the pudding box was stapled to the chart, but the pudding was gone!

Inclusion of the hearing-impaired students in the regular school program is supported through training of the total staff and of the teachers of the handicapped.

Through the use of evaluation instruments, improvement has been measured in articulation and facilition of speech; in usage of residual hearing; and in psychological and social development. A parent-attitude checklist prepated by the school division has indicated that parents have learned to assist their children in the development of audition skills.

Perhaps most important, there has been noticable improvement in the self-concept of these students in the period since the initiation of the program.

Every day career opportunities are broadening for all hearing impaired students. Already one hearing impaired student at the Appomattox County High School is looking into her choice of colleges. Employers are becoming increasingly aware of the high ideals set by hearing impaired students and of the dedication they have to their work.

Blood donors excel

Appomattox Countians donated 111 units of blood Monday at the regularly scheduled visit of the Bloodmobile, according to Bloodmobile spokesperson Alice Martin.

She said a total of 114 donors registered, and 111 units of blood were collected.

The Appomattox quota of 100 units of blood was once again surpassed.

Martin added that there were four first-time donors at the Bloodmobile station Monday.

"It was a really good day," Martin commented. "We express our sincerest thanks to all who came by and donated to make this visit a success for Appomattox County."

Father Darkleaf

By CALVIN ROBINSON

I remembered that one way to handle the problem of fallen leaves is to run the lawnmower over them. Chews them up and no raking necessary. I tried it under a maple tree and was pleased, unfortunately leaves do not fall all at once, so may have to run the lawnmower more than had expected and this plan will not work under pine trees. As a senior citizen I have found that a certain amount of work cannot be avoided and we would benefit by spending more time working than trying to avoid work. And there are some who do not regard lawnmowing and raking as work.

The Ferko String Band, of Philadelphia, is a wonderful group. One of the main reasons I used to attend the National Tobacco Festival in Richmond was that this group was featured. I dreamed that someday we might have them in Appomattox. Most lavish costumes imaginable and "such sweet music." Favorite tune: "I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover That I Overlooked Before." And once I was there when an Appomattox young lady was crowned Queen of Tobacco land. And, of course, a big football game. This year it was my alma mater, University of Richmond against the Hokies of VPI. I tuned in on radio, alone at home. Heavens to Betsy, final score was U. of R. 18, Tech 7 and I sang a verse of No. 88 (Bring Them In).

Correction: In last week's column, we misprinted the name of Ethelyn Wade, owner of a 1964 Ford Model car with 350,000 miles. Our apologies.

A bit more about football. Two people can have a game of tennis. Or a boxing match. Ten can get up a basketball game. Nine for a baseball team and my high school team had only twelve. But football requires a lot of manpower. Squads of fifty up to a hundred. And add up all the high schools, colleges and pro football teams, managers, coaches, trainers and cheerleaders, bands and officials and all over America tens of thousands are involved in football and thus no wonder it receives so much publicity.

Mr. and Mrs. Cameron White, of St. Petersburg, Florida and Mrs. Florence Trent and daughter Lina, dropped by for a visit Sunday afternoon. They were interested in the story of Joe Sweeney and the dwelling banjo and some material I happened to have on the subject. Also such early Appomattox leaders as William Rosser. Mrs. White is the former Virginia Hancock and hails from a family long associated with leadership in Appomattox and Lynchburg. Same for the Trents.

Some say that wild turkeys are rather plentiful this year. Mrs. Gladys Johnson was driving to her home on Lucy Street Sunday when she saw five wild turkeys. One flew over the housetops to a wooden area and the other four took off on foot. Turkey Day and Thanksgiving are around the corner.

There is a surge of attention toward the basics in education. Such as reading. I am fortunate to have accumulated a fairly good library and for a week have been reading from the classics of Roman literature. Such as a rather long essay by Cicero on the subject, "The Blessings of Old Age." Cicero was born in 106 B.C., so it is fair to remark that it is noteworthy that one's life and works should be studied after such a span of time. The Bible ranks first, but we are heirs to a fabulous heritage from many sources. Cicero takes the side of Age against Youth, though glorying in each phase of life, a quote, "What one has, that one ought to use; and whatever you do, you should do it with all your strength." Your life, your home, your job, your town, your country. Thanks for reading and seeya around.

Marshall wins contest

Ben Marshall of Appomattox missed accurately predicting the outcomes of four of 23 games in last week's Times-Virginian football contest to win the popular weekly competition.

Marshall missed predicting the outcomes of the N.C. State-Clemson game (which N.C. state won), the Navy-Washington game (which Navy won), the VPI-Richmond game (which Richmond won) and the U.Va.-Wake Forest game, which U.Va. won.

Marshall tied with Beverly Coleman of Appomattox, who also missed predicting the outcomes of four of the 23 games offered, but on the tie-breaker, Marshall recorded a 52-point differential to Coleman's 61-point spread, and was consequently declared the winner.

Running close behind Marshall and Beverly Coleman were Dan G. Coleman and Plicky Williams, who each missed accurately predicting the outcomes of five of the 23 games offered in the contest.

Dan Coleman missed on the Harvard-Princeton game, the Navy-Washington game, the VPI-Richmond game, the U.Va.-Wake Forest game, and the Auburn-Mississippi State game. Williams missed on the Altavista-William Campbell game, the N.C. State-Clemson game, the Navy-Washington game, the VPI-Richmond game, and the U.Va.-Wake Forest game.

Many of the 65 contestants in last week's competition missed seven or more games, as there were numerous upsets in the college category.

The football contest continues this week, with rules and details on the contest page inside the Times-Virginian.

ARS passes goal

The Appomattox County Volunteer Rescue Squad had surpassed its fundraising goal by $1,100 as of press time Tuesday, according to ARS spokesman Ray Noble.

A total of $16,831.31 had been donated or pledged with three days remaining in the month-long drive, Noble said.

The volunteer squad set out at the beginning of this month to raise $15,700, Noble said. He noted that all funds pledged above and beyond the campaign goal would be "put to good use, for purposes such as buying new and better equipment."

The volunteer rescue squad provides emergency services free of charge to residents in and around Appomattox County.

Appomattox County's squad has three emergency vehicles, two rescue boats, and a variety of sophisticated emergency equipment such as heart-monitoring devices.

"On behalf of the Appomattox County Volunteer Rescue Squad, I would like to thank the citizens of Appomattox who have so generously given to help support the continued operation of our squad," Noble said this week. "Without the public's support, we could not continue to render the emergency services we currently offer."
